Floyd, Higdon review the 2012 General Assembly

JENNIFER CORBETT
jcorbett@kystandard.com

As the Kentucky General Assembly winds down, legislators are working to fix any last-minute adjustments before the year comes to an end.

To some, the assembly was full of positives and negatives. State Rep. David Floyd saw two of his bills became law, but in many areas, he saw the assembly come up short.

To others the year was OK — a lot of work got done, but nothing exciting happened.

“It was a session where a lot of people said we didn’t do anything,” said State Sen. Jimmy Higdon, noting that while it wasn’t an “outstanding” session, legislators got a lot of work done and passed the budget.

After a drawn-out debate, legislators agreed on the $19.4 billion state budget (House Bill 265). It passed 36-1 in the Senate and 87-1 in the House.

According to Floyd, it was their No. 1 goal to finish the budget and pass it on time.

Per the budget, state agencies will receive an 8.4 percent cut in funding with the exception of Medicaid and corrections.

State universities will be cut 6.4 percent and K-12 schools will receive baseline funding. Three hundred social workers will be hired with an additional $21 million allotted for community services for people with disabilities.

Part of the budget includes a “rainy day fund,” which is money set aside for necessary government expenses in emergencies such as tornados, floods and ice storms.

Other highlights from the budget include $3.5 million for the Kentucky Horse Park and $2.5 million to rework Rupp Arena and downtown Lexington. State employees will not receive a pay raise.

From here, Gov. Steve Beshear will have the opportunity to review the budget and veto portions, or all of it.

As the General Assembly heads into its last meeting, Sen. Higdon points out two priorities they will have to address: pass a Six-Year Road Plan and House Bill 4.

The $3.7 billion Six-Year Road Plan would identify

The Bardstown-Nelson County Human Rights Commission took Monday night to celebrate and honor those in the community who take a stance for the people who are often silenced.

During the 2012 Outstanding

Achievement Award and Youth Essay Contest Winners banquet, community members gathered at the Bardstown-Nelson County Civic Center to honor a unique organization that goes above and beyond the call of duty.

The Sisters of Charity of Nazareth were honored with the 2012 Outstanding Achievement Award for its advocacy work. Mary Elizabeth Miller was on hand to accept the award.

According to Susan Gatz, vice president of the community at the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth, for the past year the Sisters have been focusing on two main issues: immigration and human trafficking.

With the topic of immigration, the Sisters educated themselves by watching documentaries, as well as pay attention to what’s passed in the Kentucky Legislature to ensure no one’s human rights are dismissed.

As for the subject of human trafficking, Gatz said the Sisters met with a representative from Catholic

BLOOMFIELD CITY COUNCIL

New wastewater rates set for Bloomfield customers

Lower than expected but still twice as high

KENNY FOGLE
SPECIAL TO THE KENTUCKY STANDARD

The much anticipated sewer ordinance outlining rates for customers for the Bloomfield services was finally unveiled Monday evening at the City Council meeting. While a more than double increase will be necessary, it could have been much worse.

In July of last year Mark Sneve of Strand Associates in Louisville outlined the proposed project for the residents of Bloomfield to send their wastewater to Bardstown for treatment as opposed to building a new water treatment plant in Bloomfield. With the old treatment plant nearing the end of its useful life, the council had earlier decided it would be more cost-effective to tie in with Bardstown rather than replace its old equipment and continue regular operations costs. Figuring in loan payments, possible grant fund, and monthly payments to Bardstown for

THE PATH TO RECOVERY: An addict reclaims her life, a state struggles for prevention

This article is the last in a three-part series exploring the growing epidemic of prescription pill abuse and addiction in Nelson County and Kentucky. This series follows the story of a recovering addict, who asked to remain anonymous under an assumed name for this series, and explores broader trends contributing to pill abuse through three stages: in Friday's paper, "A growing addiction;" in Sunday's paper, "Impacting a community;" and in today's paper, "The path to recovery."

ERIN L. MCCOY

The 27-month journey through Nelson County Drug Court for recovering prescription pill addict “Ashley” required her to find the self-esteem that in many ways she never had, and rebuild her relationships with family and friends.

After being charged with attempted burglary and 10 counts of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud for doctor-shopping, Nelson Circuit Court Judge Charles Simms ordered Ashley to spend 30 days in a rehabilitation facility, then enroll in Drug Court.

She was treated with suboxone in rehab, which helped to gradually wean her off the prescription painkillers without the intense sickness and body pains many experience during withdrawal.

But throughout Ashley’s recovery, the challenges were as much emotional as they were physical.

“Quitting the drugs was the easy part. I had to learn how to live again, and I had to learn how to live the right way again.”

As Ashley struggled to find a job — a requirement of the program — she relapsed once, four months into the Drug Court program, and had to spend 28 days in jail.

“It was the longest I had ever spent away from my

Woman arrested for DUI after truck overturns

STAFF REPORT

A Nelson County woman was arrested after allegedly overturning a truck in a ditch off Bloomfield Road Sunday evening.

Susan L. Houston, 33, of Loretto Road was lodged in the Nelson County Jail on charges of first-degree driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs.

The accident occurred about 7:37 p.m. Sunday in the area of 6134

Bloomfield Road. Houston allegedly drove a 2004 Ford F150 pickup off the shoulder of the roadway, overcorrected and went into a ditch, where the truck overturned, a press release from the Nelson County Sheriff's Department states.

Houston and her three passengers were reportedly checked by Nelson County EMS at the scene of the accident before Houston was taken to jail. All parties apparently had minor injuries, the press release states.

The truck sustained severe damage. Seat belts were in use by some or all of the individuals in the truck.

United Way of Nelson County had regular monthly meeting

The United Way of Nelson County recently held its regular monthly meeting to begin a review of an updated Constitution and By-Laws for the organization which is required by the national United Way to be done periodically. Other measures to be updated will be related to ethics, personnel and finance and will be done during the next several months. It was reported that several local businesses are planning to begin a payroll deduction program this year and many others have looked into the United Way as a means to better support the local community and the 20 charitable agencies it represents.

Tim White, recently hired as the Human Resources director at Barton Brands, was welcomed as a new member of the Board of Directors.

Discussions were initiated on selecting an honorary campaign chairperson for this fall. The local chapter had done this in the past with some success, but had not selected anyone for the past decade or so. The honorary chairperson would be a spokesperson for community support and would be someone who has demonstrated a deep interest in helping others through community involvement. Other ideas were also explored for the annual campaign to include updating a short video highlighting the United Way of Nelson County and the work of its agencies. A list of possible speakers for the kickoff luncheon was also discussed.

Dancing for a Cause, a TV show to be aired on Channel 6, or Channel 116 on Bardstown Cable will donate all proceeds from voting to the United Way this year. The program will air starting the second week of April and feature various contestants learning a number of steps. The show is similar to the Dancing with the Stars show on ABC network.

More information can be found at www.united-wayofnc.com. The next meeting will be April 14.

The Rev. Bill Hammer of the Basilica of St. Joseph Proto-Cathedral blessed several rooms of the old Rizer building on North Second Street with Holy Water. The building is now home to St. Vincent de Paul, which opened there last week. Attendees at the blessing and dedication Monday morning included monks of the Abbey of Gethsemani and members of the Nelson County Ministerial Association.

At Monday's blessing and dedication of the new location for St. Vincent de Paul, St. Vincent Director Margaret Mattingly holds up a plaque recognizing those who made large donations toward the move and the purchase of the building, including Pike and Marie Conway, Richard and Bob Heaton, John and Sally Newcomb and Michael Salsman. More names will be added, including Chad Filiatreau of Joe Filiatreau Floor Covering, Mattingly said. The Rev. Bill Hammer of the Basilica of St. Joseph Proto-Cathedral stands at left.

>> NELSON CIRCUIT COURT SENTENCINGS

STAFF REPORT

The following people were sentenced recently in Nelson Circuit Court. All had previously entered a plea of guilty or had been found guilty during a criminal trial.

- David Ramos, 20, Bardstown, was sentenced to three years in jail for complicity to first-degree possession of a controlled substance. He was granted probation for a period of five years following set conditions, including forfeiting all items seized and allowing probation and parole and law enforcement officers into his residence to conduct inspections. According to court records, on or about Oct. 28, 2010, Ramos and another person possessed cocaine.

- Shane Hooper, 27, Cox's Creek, was granted a supervised pretrial diversion for first-degree criminal mischief. The diversion will be in place for a period of two years or until restitution is paid in full, whichever occurs later. Conditions of the diversion include paying $4,625 (less any insurance payment) to the victims. The diversion will be unsupervised if Hooper lives out of state. According to court records, on March 4, 2011, Hooper cut down and ruined trees in the victims' yard without permission, causing $4,625 worth of damage.

Mitsuba investigated for price-fixing charges

jcorbett@kystandard.com

A national corporation, which has a manufacturing site in Bardstown, has been investigated for charges of price-fixing by authorities in the United States and Japan.

Mitsuba, 901 Withrow Court, is part of the international Mitsuba Corporation, which was under investigation for its alleged involvement in a price-fixing cartel.

Media outlets reported the Mitsuba Subsidiary in Michigan was raided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in early March.

Charges of price-fixing stem from Mitsuba Corporation officials allegedly fixing prices of their products and selecting bidders in advance for certain projects.

The Kentucky Standard contacted the Bardstown branch for comment, but a plant official deferred all comments to the headquarters in Michigan.

According to David Stevens, vice president of American Mitsuba, the price-fixing allegations have already been addressed by Mitsuba's legal counsel in Japan and everything has been taken care of.

Per the press release, the charge of price-fixing is when competitors set their prices to buy or sell goods or services at a certain price point. This, in turn, benefits all businesses or individuals that are on the same side of the market. Price-fixing violates competition law since it controls the market price or the supply and demand of a good or service.

The Bardstown Mitsuba branch distributes front wiper systems, rear wiper systems, sunroof motors and power seat motors for motor vehicles.

Bloomfield burglar accused of Fairfield P.O. break-in

STAFF REPORT

Only two weeks after being sentenced in a string of Bloomfield burglaries, Samuel Connor Mays, 18, Bloomfield, has been charged with breaking into the Fairfield Post Office in October.

Mays was indicted for third-degree burglary and third-degree criminal mischief in Nelson Circuit Court Wednesday.

The break-in allegedly occurred Oct. 21, 2011, 10 days before at least seven Bloomfield establishments, including a doctor's office, a funeral home and a church, were burglarized in one night.

Mays pleaded guilty to three of those burglaries, but police said he denied involvement in all but two.

The indictment alleges Mays damaged property belonging to the post office. That property was valued at less than $500.

Nelson County Sheriff's Department Detective Jonathan Snow told The Kentucky Standard last week that Mays allegedly tried to get into the post office safe, but was unsuccessful.

Snow added that Mays had reportedly admitted to the post office burglary.

Mays' bail was set at $5,000 cash only, plus conditions. Arraignment is set for 9 a.m. April 19.

- James William Miller, 27, Bardstown, two counts unlawful transaction with a minor second degree. On or about Feb. 25, Miller allegedly caused two minors to engage in illegal controlled substance activity involving marijuana. Bail was set at $5,000 cash only, plus conditions.

- Timothy Wayne Bellendier II, 21, Bardstown, theft of a controlled substance. On or about March 28, Bellendier allegedly took hydrocodone belonging to another person. Bail was set at $5,000 cash only, plus conditions.
- Christy L. Willyard, a.k.a. Christy Sallengs, 35, Radcliff, first-degree possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia. On or about Jan. 20, Willyard allegedly possessed methamphetamine. Bond is to be set at arraignment.
- Terrance D.

Montgomery, 32, Bloomfield, possession of a handgun by a convicted felon, amended indictment. On or about April 2, 2011, Montgomery allegedly possessed a chrome Colt .38 special detective revolver. Bail was set same bond as primary charges plus conditions.

- Daniel Scott Lacy, 53, Boston, second-degree persistent felony offender, amended indictment. Lacy was previously convicted of possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell over 0.5 ounces marijuana. Bail was set same bond as primary charges plus conditions.

One injured in North Third Street collision

STAFF REPORT

A Bardstown woman was transported to Flaget Memorial Hospital Saturday afternoon after allegedly pulling in front of a vehicle on North Third Street.

Deborah J. Kays, 52, suffered a possible neck injury in the collision. No one else was reportedly injured.

According to a Bardstown Police report, the accident occurred about 3:29 p.m. Saturday south of the John Rowan Boulevard intersection.

James W. Conn, 63, Bardstown, was driving his 2005 Dodge Magnum northbound on Third Street past the Kentucky Home Square shopping center when Kays allegedly attempted to turn her 2010 Toyota Camry left out of the shopping center onto Third Street. Kays reportedly told police she did not see Conn's vehicle. The Camry struck the Magnum's driver's side rear door.

Kays' two passengers, Anthony and Kayla Kays, ages 7 and 4 respectively, were not injured. Neither was Conn or his passenger, Carolyn C. Conn, 71, Bardstown.

All involved were wearing seat belts.

Cox's Creek man arrested for arson

Suspected of vandalizing two gas station bathrooms

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

A Cox's Creek man was arrested for first-degree arson and is suspected of vandalizing two gas station bathrooms in southern Nelson County Saturday evening.

Frederick Allen Sanger, 26, was also charged with possession of synthetic cannabinoid agonists or piperazines — synthetic marijuana — when he was booked at the Nelson County Jail at 10:39 p.m.

New Haven Police Officer K.C. Holbert was dispatched to a reported arson at 150 N. Main St. in New Haven — the Five Star gas station — at 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

Sanger had already allegedly left the scene by the time Holbert arrived.

"He set fire to the men's bathroom ... to the toilet paper holder mounted on the wall. It had two, three rolls of toilet paper in it. He set it on fire," Holbert alleged.

One of the employees had used a fire extinguisher to put out most of the fire, which was still smoldering when Holbert arrived.

"I just opened the case up, pulled the rolls out and poured water on them," he said.

But that wasn't the first incident of vandalism in which Sanger was allegedly involved Saturday night.

"He also had apparently done some damage in Culvertown, at Culver's Store, just prior to that," Holbert said.

Culver's Country Kwik Mart co-owner Louis Culver said his employees noticed the bathroom was flooding when water began to run into the store's office. "According to one of my employees this guy came in, but I guess they didn't realize until later on after he'd left that he went to the bathroom back there and I guess stuffed some towels or something down in the washbasin and locked the door behind him and left," Culver said.

There was no serious damage to the bathroom or store, he said.

One of Culver's employees called another employee who happened to be in New Haven, and who saw the Black Chevrolet pickup in which Sanger was a passenger pull into the Five Star, according to Culver.

Holbert said that employee may have followed the truck to New Haven, but Culver said the employee wasn't working at his store at the time of the incident.

The employee entered the Five Star bathroom after Sanger allegedly left and alerted employees to the fire, according to Holbert.

He was also able to provide Holbert with a license plate number.

"The kid gave me a perfect description of him — what he was wearing and everything," Holbert said.

An hour later, Holbert arrested Sanger based on the descriptions and video from Five Star. Sanger denied any involvement, Holbert said.

At this time, Holbert believes the driver of the truck was unaware of what was going on. The driver reportedly went to Five Star for a "legitimate reason," while Sanger didn't buy anything but allegedly spent about four minutes in the bathroom.

Sanger allegedly had synthetic marijuana in his possession when he was arrested.

Dining on delectable treats for a good cause

Event will benefit Hospice, Hospitality Association

JENNIFER CORBETT
jcorbett@kystandard.com

Delectable treats and mouth-watering sweets will be offered as the main course during the 19th annual Taste of Bardstown Monday.

The event, which is sponsored by Hospice of Nelson County and the Bardstown-Nelson County Hospitality Association, will be 5:30-7:30 p.m. April 16 at the St. Gregory Parish Community Center. Tickets are $20 in advance, $25 at the door or $200 to reserve a table for 10.

"I'm so excited about it," said Amy Taylor, volunteer coordinator for Hospice. "The food is delicious. There are lots of good choices."

It's the first year Taste of Bardstown will be at St. Gregory and Taylor said the new site accommodates more people.

Proceeds from the night will benefit Hospice, as well as the Hospitality Association.

Restaurants will set up booths and offer an all-you-can-eat buffet featuring miniature appetizing meals off its menus.

Some of the restaurants that have signed up for the 2012 Taste of Bardstown include Chapeze House, Domino's Pizza, Down Home BBQ, Kurtz, My Old Kentucky

This year's Taste of Bardstown is 5:30-7:30 p.m. Monday at the St. Gregory Parish Community Center.

Home Dinner Train, Short Line Diner, Sugar Buzz, Susie Q, The Old Talbott Tavern and Java Jirah.

However, Taylor notes that the number of restaurants at the event isn't final and many of them will sign up.

Last year, some of the items that were served included Swedish meatballs, BBQ wings, pizza, pork, macaroni and cheese, green beans, corn pudding, bread pudding, chicken and dumplings, ribs, cinnamon melts and mini hot browns.

Aside from dining on tasty feasts, there will also be a silent auction, as well as a live auction. This year has already started out to be a success for Taste of Bardstown, as more tickets have been sold than ever before.

Taylor added that another benefit to attending the event is socializing with friends and family.

"You will see a lot of people you know," she said. "It's just a really fun social event."

Man convicted of sexually abusing two children

ERIN L. MCCOY

A Bardstown man is a lifetime registered sex offender after sexually abusing two young children.

Nathan Greathouse, 27, pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree sexual abuse (victim under 12) and was sentenced to five years in prison Thursday. Greathouse's motion for probation was denied and he was sentenced to five additional years of conditional discharge after his jail sentence is complete.

Court records state that some time around 2007, Greathouse forced sexual intercourse on two young girls. One child said she told him to stop but he wouldn't.

Greathouse was convicted of first-degree sodomy (victim under 12) in Nelson Circuit Court in 2003. He was already a registered sex offender after that conviction, though his probation had expired on that case, Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Joseph Ballard said.

Greathouse was credited with 62 days of jail time.

Taste of Bardstown brings together good food, good cause

It's always great when you can get a good meal that samples all the wonderful restaurants in one community. It's even better when that sampling of food is for a great cause.

That's exactly what happens each year with the Taste of Bardstown event.

This year marks the 19th annual for the fundraising event that raises money for Hospice of Nelson County and the Bardstown-Nelson County Hospitality Association.

Local restaurants and groups come together to make the event possible each year. While that's an important component, it wouldn't be the same without those who buy the tickets for the event each year. This year is a benchmark for the event because more tickets have already been sold for Monday's event than ever before in the Taste's history.

The event is 5:30-7:30 p.m. April 16 at the St. Gregory Parish Community Center. Tickets are $20 in advance, $25 at the door or $200 to reserve a table for 10.

While it promises to be a place for those with an appetite, it can also whet your whistle in a different way by knowing you're giving to a good cause.

In addition to the food samples offered by local restaurants and caterers, there will be a live auction and a silent auction for bidders.

You just won't be able to find a better deal Monday night and you won't be able to find more local people in one place. The Taste of Bardstown is not only a fundraiser but it has also turned into a social event.

Last year, some items that were served included Swedish meatballs, BBQ wings, pizza, pork, macaroni and cheese, green beans, corn pudding, bread pudding, chicken and dumplings, ribs, cinnamon melts and mini hot browns. You won't want to miss out on these this year.

So get your tickets now and plan on making your way to the St. Gregory Parish Community Center Monday night for a good meal and a good cause. It doesn't get much better than that.

OUR VIEWS

Titanic voyage — 100 years later

It's been 15 years since James Cameron's blockbuster film, "Titanic," smashed records and made its way into box office history.

The movie told a timeless love story of Jack Dawson and Rose DeWitt Bukater. Dawson, a poor third class passenger, was intrigued by Rose the minute he saw her on the ship's deck.

As the movie proceeds, the viewer sees their love story unwind up until the early morning hours of April 15, 1912. Around 2:20 a.m. the vessel strikes an iceberg, breaks in half and sinks to the bottom of the Atlantic — claiming more than 1,500 lives.

While the story of Jack and Rose was only developed in Hollywood, it is the true story of Titanic, a ground-breaking ocean liner for its time.

It set sail from England on April 10, 1912, and was supposed to reach New York by April 17.

Now, almost 100 years later the world is honoring

>> jcorbett@kystandard.com

those who lost their lives on that fateful voyage in 1912.

One example is how James Cameron's "Titanic" has been re-released into theaters in 3D.

Do we really need another 3D movie?

While I loved the movie when it came out in 1997 (it was the only movie I have ever seen five times in the theater), it isn't worth paying more money for 3D glasses to see it again. I already have a copy of the movie at home. For me, the movie is much more than 3D graphics. It tells a story of a doomed ocean liner that changed the standards of cruise ships.

Another particularly interesting way society has been commemorating the Titanic is the MS Balmoral cruise liner, which left England on Sunday — 100 years to the day when the Titanic set sail.

In an eerie beginning to their trip, passengers on the MS Balmoral had to step off the ship due to strong winds. The ship was delayed for two hours, but ultimately set sail toward New York with no problems.

One thing is for sure, the MS Balmoral is doing something most other ships haven't done: retrace the same journey that the Titanic took in April 1912. They will hold a commemorative ceremony at 2:20 a.m. April 15 in the exact spot the Titanic submerged into the North Atlantic Ocean.

Various national media outlets have been reporting that many of the passengers on the MS Balmoral are direct descendants of those who perished. ABC News interviewed a woman named, Jane Allen, whose great uncle died on the ship. Her great aunt survived by making it onto a lifeboat.

I remember being 10 years old when the movie came out. I don't have any relatives, which I know of, who were on the ship.

Even though it's been 100 years since the sinking of the Titanic, I don't think I would want to go on a vessel that's retracing the same route. While it would offer a different glimpse into the historic events that happened the morning of April 15, 1912, being in the exact spot where 1,500 people lost their lives would bring a whole new meaning to what happened.

I do appreciate the history of the area and respect those who are aboard the MS Balmoral. It's something they're interested in, and retracing Titanic's route is something they wanted to experience.

What are causes of our suffering?

Our Christian Community has now moved beyond a sacred week of pondering the Person and consequences of remaining faithful to truth and mission, no matter what.

A line of thought: just what are the sets of causes of our suffering?

It seems like parents and teachers try to point out to us that some sufferings we bring on ourselves by what we do or don't do. There are choices — about friends, actions, ways we abuse our bodies, meet our responsibilities or not.

Some "challenges" come from other people — who likewise make choices about relating with me, abuse or attempt to exploit me, fail in responsibilities toward me.

There's another set we used to call "acts of God" like weather and its consequences or the apparently fluke timing of events. Accidents fit into this category. Such surely can re-arrange one's plans or calendar at times.

Then there is the body of decisions we make together that involve many people: laws and regulations at the various levels of our society and our customs. They can bite; they actually can be wise or not or simply outdated. They can certainly add to our frustration level up to causing great inconvenience. Frustration only grows if we are having to pay for others to make these directives.

SR. MARY SCHMUCK RSM

>> schmuckrsm@scnazarethky.org

This last set is getting a lot of attention as we go through this national election season. I hear proposals from some of our leaders that "government just needs to get out of the way," stop intervening in our everyday lives, cease interfering with our meeting our own individual needs.

It sounds like our business community is very upset with government regulations, but a question comes to mind: which companies in our business community want much less government?

An article came through recently that noted some small businesses really don't want minimal regulations — because they need the protection of good order, a sheriff and a courthouse to protect them from rogue and/or enormous businesses. (One of my biggest "bones to pick" with some of our big box stores is that it seems like they will not let any other small business have a niche in the area market. The mega businesses have the economy of scale to put small ones out of business by being able to absorb loss for a good while on a line of products.)

But back to each of us as individuals as well as our families: will we suffer less if there are less regulations about entities such as care of air, water and land? Product safety? Food safety?

Is it accurate to say that our state, United States and global economies are quite complex? Is it wise then to believe that 'just getting government out of our lives, out of the way' is a way to help coordinate this complexity, to counterbalance the powerful factors operative in it?

Is it an accurate reading of trends that already our national government is much challenged trying to counterbalance mega corporations and trade groups? How in the world can weakening government be helpful in such a development? Are we assuming that everyone in business is an unselfish saint?

None of this is to say that all laws, rules and regulations are wise and without need to continual examination and even revision. But do away with the vast majority of them? How can that save us from new areas of suffering, including a significant amount of it? Those perpetual criteria: who will benefit, lose? Who is deciding, getting frozen out of the decision-making process?

There is a cherished song about no one being an island. Isn't that true, and one needs more than an immediate family and circle of friends?

In this new life/resurrection time do we need to act with greater insight, wisdom, courage and strength? If we don't, then what about our suffering's causes?

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month

To the editor:
In 2011, there were 509 confirmed cases of abuse and neglect of children in Nelson County. That compared to 230 cases in Anderson, 694 cases in Bullitt, 1,274 cases in Hardin, 123 cases in LaRue, 126 cases in Marion, 130 cases in Spencer and 74 cases in Washington County. These figures come from Kentucky Child Protective Services.

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month. Shining in the sun, the pinwheel is reflective of the bright future all children deserve. I have pledged to pray for the 509 confirmed cases in Nelson County of children affected by child abuse and neglect. I have promised to take positive steps toward ensuring the protection of our children. Today pinwheels represent what every child should have — a safe and nurturing home. Please visit the booth in the Flaget Hospital lobby and take a pinwheel to show your support for preventing child abuse.

There are still good people left in the world

To the editor:
Last month I took my sister (who has dementia and is in a wheelchair) to Dr. Amy Farrell's office in Bardstown. It was a pleasure to meet Dr. Amy. As we went downstairs after my sister's appointment, it was raining and we stood inside. As we looked for our ride, different ones were coming in and out the door. One lady smiled and said, "Hi ladies." We spoke back.
But another nice lady had her baby son with her until the daddy came and picked him up. This lady asked me "Can I help you?" (It took me a while to get my sister through one door.) At first I said no thanks, then I decided to let her help us. Also she went out in the rain and looked for our driver upstairs. Whoever you are, thank you and God bless you and yours. It's so good to know there are still some nice people in this world.

It doesn't matter what color our skin is — white, black, whatever — God loves us one and all and if we don't have our house in order we better get it in order.
The Bible is fulfilling. Jesus speaks in Matthew 23:18, Chapter 24: verse 6: And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that you be not troubled for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet.
Verse 7: For nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in diverse places. All these are the beginning of sorrows.
The Bible also speaks of children against parents, parents against children. With these earthquakes happening, God is telling us something. Let all of us continue to pray for those who lost their loved ones and homes.

St. Catharine College will soon begin a year-long movie theater advertising campaign on all eight screens of the Keystone Cinemas in Bardstown.

St. Catharine College goes Hollywood – sort of

The next time you visit the Keystone Cinema 8 in Bardstown, don't be surprised if you see a few familiar faces on the silver screen. Starting on Memorial Day weekend, St. Catharine College will begin a year-long onscreen movie theater advertising campaign on all eight screens of the multiplex. So grab your popcorn and find a good seat because it's lights, camera, St. Catharine!

"This is all part of our rebranding campaign for St. Catharine," said Jim Earls, SCC's director of communications and chair of the college's marketing and communications committee. "This gives us an incredible opportunity to let people know what's going on here. There are people who pass by the campus every day who still think of St. Catharine as a junior college. It's time to familiarize the public with who we are today, not who we were 10, 20 or 50 years ago."

Much has changed for the college in just the past few years. It has even grown past offering baccalaureate degrees to now offering a graduate program. The new Emily W. Hundley Library and Center for Graduate Studies should be complete by January and the school is on-track to have a record number of graduates next month.

The decision to go with onscreen advertising was an easy one to make. Last year, nearly 200,000 tickets were sold at Keystone Cinema 8 in Bardstown. Many of those customers came from areas other than Bardstown.

"A lot of people come from surrounding counties to attend a movie there because it is a first-class theater," Earls said. "I go there several times a year and I live in Springfield. Others come from Marion County and some come from as far away as Elizabethtown. When you look at the number of people that theater draws and where they come from, we were onboard."

During the run cycle, there will be two 30-second St. Catharine ads shown in the pre-show.

"The pre-show is an 8-10 minute long cycle of ads and trivia before each scheduled start time," Earls added. "We'll have one ad placed near the start of the pre-show and the other will be placed near the end of the pre-show. These will be shot in 1080p high-definition video. The facilities at Keystone Cinema 8 are incredible, so the ads will have clear visuals and superior sound."

The Memorial Day weekend starts the season of summer blockbusters that will have people pouring into theater seats. Films such as Men In Black III, The Amazing Spider-Man and The Dark Knight Rises are some of the highly-anticipated films of the summer. But being visible on all eight screens every day means SCC will have an audience that reaches every age group.

"We'll be able to reach every demographic with this campaign," Earls said. "If it's a kid's film, action, comedy, suspense — you name it; we'll be able to reach every age group — children, teenagers, adults and seniors."

There will be six ads produced by ProMedia Group out of New Albany, Ind. Some of the ads will be aimed at traditional students who enter college right out of high school, while other ads will be targeted to non-traditional students — those either transferring from another school or are looking at attending college after being out of school for a while. There will also be some focus on other areas of education provided by SCC, such as their Continuing and Community Education program and the Master's program.

"We want all aspects of SCC life to be represented in the ads," Earls said. "The point is to show the many things students can experience during their time at St. Catharine. That means getting a quality education, expanding your knowledge not only in an academic sense, but also in a spiritual sense. We're the only four-year college that has a physical presence in Washington, Nelson and Marion counties, and this is our way of informing the public that we're not the St. Catharine College from the past, we're moving ahead and looking into the future. Now is the time to be part of everything SCC has to offer and to be a success. If that doesn't sound like a Hollywood ending, then I don't know what does."

Look for the SCC ads to hit the screen starting May 27.

Bardstown man keeps pacing forward

Brian O'Neill will run 100 miles for the soldiers who don't come home

JENNIFER CORBETT
jcorbett@kystandard.com

Whenever Brian O'Neill feels like throwing in the towel, he thinks of his fellow United States Marine Corps brothers.

But most of all, he remembers the ones who didn't come home and the children they left behind. Those kids don't have a father to wake them up every morning, cheer them on at ball games or give them advice when they need it the most.

"The military does provide some benefits for the families of slain soldiers," O'Neill said. "But it doesn't cover everything. (Those kids) don't have a dad."

As a way to provide an extra hand of support to those families, O'Neill, Bardstown, along with numerous other Marines, friends, family members and supporters are participating in a 100-mile run from Cincinnati to Columbus on Memorial Day weekend. The event is planned by the organization Always Brothers, which was started by a group of Marines who decided to embark on a mission to honor fallen brothers — veterans and their families who need assistance.

"I'm really excited," O'Neill said. "I've stepped up my training tremendously. I've been running 50 to 60 miles per week. I'm feeling great. I'm excited and I'm looking forward to it."

According to O'Neill, the group will run 100 miles in under 24 hours. It will not only raise funds for slain soldiers' children, but will also enhance the brotherhood between every Marine.

"When you serve in the Marines, there's a similar quality that each (soldier) has," he said. "So, you know what types of guys they are, what they've given up and what they've sacrificed ... Now, even though they're gone, we're still going to be there for their families."

When O'Neill decided to reconnect on Facebook with the Marines with whom he served during the 1990s, they found out that they had lost one of their own.

"We had discovered that one of the guys we served with, Tyler Swisher, was killed in 2005," O'Neill said. "We wanted to find some way to honor him."

So in August 2011, they ran "100 Miles for Swisher," which began near Camp David in Thurmont, Md., and ended at Arlington National Cemetery, where Swisher is buried.

At first, O'Neill had only planned on running a 30-mile portion, but instead he ran 75 miles.

"At the end of it, we had that kind of feeling that we had caught lightning in a bottle," he said. "It was just a tremendous experience."

Always Brothers didn't want to stop there, so the group set out to help as many military families as they could. An idea that immediately came up was the Lima Company (3rd Battalion, 25th Marines), a reserve unit based out of Columbus, Ohio, which had lost 23 men during the war in Iraq.

Turns out the Lima Company has a connection close to home for O'Neill.

"It just so happens that a friend of mine that I was in the Marine Reserves with, Mike Wimberg, his younger brother, David, is one of the guys Lima Company had lost," O'Neill said.

The group decided to keep the format it used for "100 Miles for Swisher," with Lima Company. Even through it all, their fallen friend Swisher is still at the forefront of their minds.

As a way to still honor his legacy, the event will begin in Swisher's hometown, Mariemont, Ohio, and continue to Columbus, where the Lima Company is stationed. They already have a path laid out and supporters lined up to help run aid stations, which will be available every 3 to 7 miles for any runner who needs to stop, eat or rest. For the entire length of the course, the runners will stay at the same pace with each other.

"Which really makes it kind of special too," O'Neill added. "We're together."

We're talking and we're catching up."

Twenty-three relay teams have been organized in honor of each of the men who were killed in action.

"They're going to make sure at any given point in the run course, there will be somebody representing all 23 of those members," O'Neill said.

Now their work is garnering national attention, as Ted Nugent, Red Bull and Saucony Athletic Shoes and Supplies have already donated money to their cause.

Most of all, Always Brothers hopes to continue to be a support system for the families who no longer have a father. They will push through the entire 100-mile course, so these kids will continue to know how much support they truly do have around them.

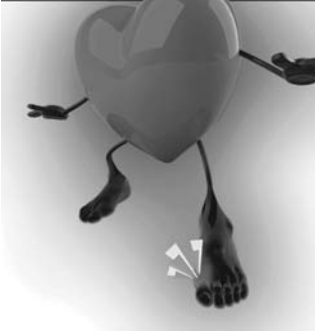

"The motto is relentless forward progress," O'Neill said. "Keep moving forward. ... If it hurts to run and it hurts to walk, then just go ahead and run. ... The Marine Corp is such a brotherhood, that we're like, 'You guys are hurting, and we're hurting, too. We're still here for you.' That's why we have the name Always Brothers."

To donate to Always Brothers 100-mile run, set up a Paypal account on the Web site alwaysbrothers.org, call Brian O'Neill at (502) 664-2267 or mail checks to Always Brothers P.O. Box 320513 Fairfield, CT 06825.

After a 100-mile run, members cross the finish line in Arlington, Va., where Tyler Swisher is buried.

Charities in Louisville, who has been working to spread awareness of the issue.

The representative encouraged the Sisters to initiate a Nelson County task force to fight the cause. Gatz noted that a wide array of people showed up to the first meeting, so they broadened their cause to violence prevention.

Aside from task forces, the Sisters are also working hand-in-hand with local business owners to prevent sexual assaults in the area.

"We're working with other women religious groups in the area to put together a letter that we will take to hotels during Derby time," Gatz said, noting that during high-profile activities the number of sexual assaults rise, so they want to keep hotel owners aware of it.

Another activity the Sisters do to spread awareness of human trafficking is sponsor a newsletter that comes out once a month.

Since it's the bicentennial celebration of the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth, the Sisters have chosen a campaign to raise funds to help son, and it killed me,” Ashley remembered. “That’s when I got my head together and decided I’ve got to put my whole self into this. ... I began working and that made me feel better about myself, too, and I never got sanctioned again after that.”

Ashley was still in pain as a result of her endometriosis — the reason she was originally prescribed painkillers — and eventually had a hysterectomy. Meanwhile, she came face-to-face with the personal challenges that her addiction had masked.

“You start having all these emotions again, and it’s kind of like a roller coaster of emotions,” she said. “There was also psychological problems I had to begin with, before I started using. I had depression. I had anxiety. I had held onto resentments from childhood — things that I dealt with as a little girl that I had not properly dealt with as an adult. So Drug Court gives you the tools to deal with all that.”

After 27 months, Ashley graduated from Drug Court — drug-free and determined to stay the course toward a better future.

“I feel better today than I’ve ever felt, and I feel good about myself because I know today I’m making the right decisions.”

Local prevention efforts

Drug Court programs throughout the country have helped countless people like Ashley kick their addiction. But doctors, law enforcement and government agencies hope to counter the growing prescription pill problem by making those pills harder to obtain in the first place.

At the Bardstown Police Department’s last prescription pill collection, which prevents unwanted prescriptions from lingering in medicine cabinets, police collected 46 pounds of prescriptions. But now, prescriptions can be dropped off at the station at 212 Nelson County Plaza any time, even after hours.

Bardstown Police Capt. Tom Roby said local law enforcement has kept the lines of communication open with local doctors. But one of the best methods of communication allows doctors to share information amongst themselves — a program called Kentucky All Schedule Prescription Electronic Reporting, or KASPER.

KASPER retains information from participating doctors on anyone to whom they have prescribed schedule drugs, such as painkillers or anti-anxiety medication. The goal is to prevent doctor-shopping — when addicts visit multiple doctors asking for medication without disclosing their other prescriptions.

“The KASPER system absolutely should be utilized, and I think physicians are not wise if they don’t use it,” Dr. Jacob Vincent of Family Medical Center in Bardstown said.

Because of the growing prescription pill problem, Vincent has begun taking additional precautions in his practice, urine screening all patients who are prescribed painkillers.

Most frequently Vincent will drop a patient found to have any non-prescribed or illegal substances in his system. Vincent may try to work with patients he knows well, but in most cases won’t prescribe them narcotics anymore.

In general, Vincent prescribes narcotics less often now — especially if a patient is new to his practice or does not have an obvious source of pain, such as a broken bone.

“Frankly, I’m less likely to give narcotics, particularly to younger people,” he said. “For instance, if a 25-year-old comes in with back pain, it would be an unusual circumstance now that I would even consider giving them a narcotic.”

Legislating prevention

Not all Kentucky doctors use KASPER, and that’s something District 14 Sen. Jimmy Higdon wants to change.

House Bill 4 is expected to come up for final vote on the last day of the Kentucky General Assembly Thursday, and while Higdon says it contains some provisions he does not support, if passed the bill could significantly reduce the availability of prescription pills. A handful of states have passed similar legislation.

A top priority should be to increase transparency between government agencies, the Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure and law enforcement, Higdon said. That was the focus of a similar bill he introduced on the issue, Senate Bill 2, which stalled in March.

“There needs to be some communication between all of those, and right now there’s not,” he said.

The bill would require all physicians to have a KASPER account.

However, Higdon said he opposed a provision that would set standards for when doctors should check a person’s history in KASPER. Higdon said he preferred the bill should require the Board of Medical Licensure to set its own administrative regulations within a set time frame.

Vincent agreed that forcing doctors to check KASPER no matter the circumstances could complicate doctors’ work unnecessarily.

“I think sometimes too many regulations can be an impediment to helping people,” he said. “With an acute injury, I don’t feel an obligation to necessarily check a KASPER report.”

Higdon further opposes a provision that would require doctors to pay to use KASPER.

The bill would require statistics on drug use and prescriptions to be gathered and reported regularly. Such tracking could allow the state to pinpoint high-prescribing counties or doctors, and learn the full extent of the prescription pill problem.

“We really want to know how many people are actually dying of drug overdoses. We’re assuming now around 82 a month — more than 1,000 a year [statewide],” Higdon said.

Setting stricter standards for who can own and manage pain management clinics, which sometimes over-prescribe prescription painkillers, is another aim of the bill. HB4 requires such clinics to be doctor-owned and sets standards for that doctor’s qualifications, Higdon explained.

HB4 stalled without enough votes to pass March

30. A number of issues held up the bill, according to Higdon, including a provision that would only allow doctors to prescribe 30-day supplies of schedule drugs if they are shipped by mail instead of 90-day supplies. Higdon believes that such a provision would increase costs for Medicaid and state employee health insurance by increasing doctor’s visits, as well as increase the cost for the patient. He stated the provision would apply to many drugs that are not commonly abused, such as equilibrium drugs often used by the elderly.

Furthermore, Higdon said he would not support the bill if it comes up for vote with a provision moving KASPER from Health and Family Services to the Attorney General’s office.

“[With] the amount of [private] information that’s available through these records ... I’m just concerned that the Attorney General’s Office being a political office — I just want to make sure that this information that they have is not used in an inappropriate way,” Higdon said.

Recovering together

While the Kentucky legislature battles out the details, former addicts like Ashley are joining the battle many Kentuckians have been fighting for years.

Two years clean next month, Ashley now chairs a meeting as part of a Narcotics Anonymous and Alcoholics Anonymous fellowship.

“That’s my goal right now — I want to make it a little bit less hard on people who are maybe thinking they have a problem or aren’t sure if they do to ask for help, because I wish there had been somebody who had said that to me,” she said.

For recovering addicts, Ashley suggests the route that helped her most: “Attend a lot of meetings,” she said. “That’s where I found the greatest help, was with other fellow addicts who have been there and can honestly say they understand how you feel.”

Ashley even takes her son, now 9 years old, with her to meetings sometimes. She wants to be honest with him, and she also wants to warn him about the dangers of drugs.

Ashley and her son have made good friends at some of these meetings, and Ashley said she hopes the story of her recovery can provide some motivation or guidance to others.

“There’s a lot of good people who are addicts. They’ve just made bad choices,” she said. “A lot of women — their children have been removed from their home and removed from their care, and they see me with my son and it gives them even more reason to focus on their recovery, because they want to be there with their child one day.”

Ashley’s relationship with her family — who stayed by her side through addiction and recovery — has never been better than it is today.

“This disease is going to be with me the rest of my life. I have to have my recovery every day. And I don’t have to be ashamed anymore,” she said. “It was really hard but I’ve learned how strong I really am now, and I’ve learned that I’m worth it — that I’m a strong woman and I’m worth it — and as long as I treat this disease every day, I never have to go back to that place again.”

roads or highways that need to be corrected and lay out a timeline for them to be reconstructed to the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

If legislators don't pass the six-year plan on the last day of assembly, they would have to call a special session and vote on it at a later time.

According to Floyd, the plan should have been addressed earlier and since the assembly waited so long, it leaves room for more mistakes to be made.

"I wish we could have done it earlier," he said, noting that when things go to deadline it often appears with errors.

The assembly will also have to vote on House Bill 4, which will require doctors to register with and use the Kentucky All Schedule Prescription Reporting (KASPER) system prior to prescribing controlled substances to patients.

Some of the highlights and bills passed in the General Assembly include:

- Senate Bill 3 limits the amount of pseudoephedrine-based drugs available without a prescription to 15 grams per year and 3.6 grams per month. It would require the use of an electronic sales logging system, which would require the system to block the sales of certain purchasers. The bill would request annual statistical reporting and prohibit the sales of ephedrine-based products to certain drug offenders.

Higdon said the original version of this bill was very strict, but after much discussion a compromise was made. Per the amendments to SB 3, a person can buy pseudoephedrine every month, which would equal to the recommended dose once a day.

No restrictions will be set on gel caps or liquids. The goal is to allow people to take the medicine they need, while restricting those who tend to misuse the product or use it to create methamphetamine.

"It should not be overly burdensome," Higdon noted.

But Floyd feels like the bill isn't enough to stop the misuse of the product. He thinks SB 3 did nothing to stop the issue and would enhance the opportunity for surrogates to buy pseudoephedrine.

According to Floyd, SB 3 would reduce the monthly purchase limit by 20 percent, which in reality, creates a path for someone to recruit five individuals to buy the product for them to create methamphetamine.

- An amendment to House Bill 495 was passed during the assembly. The amendment addresses the $1 billion loan the state had to borrow from the federal government to unemployment compensation.

In the past, Kentucky lost a lot of its jobs and many businesses went under. The companies that went under weren't able to pay for their employees' unemployment compensation. In order to cover all of the costs, the state took out a $1 billion loan from the federal government.

Now, it's time to start paying it back.

HB 495 proposes that the House proposed a $21 per employee annual surcharge to prevent a $400 per employee Federal penalty

Higdon said he has a lot of issues with this particular bill and said there's still a lot of work that needs to be done to alleviate it. Most of all, he doesn't want to create a burden for many employers to help cover the costs.

He refers to it as a "catch all bill" because employers in the state will inherit the liability, which could create a reason for industries not to set up shop in the state.

- House Bill 429, which would increase the continued education requirements for funeral directors and embalmers, was passed.

Floyd worked against this particular bill, because, in his opinion, the primary purpose is to make people come to a convention. But the bill made it through.

water treatment services, Sneve said rates for existing customers would have to be tripled in order to complete and maintain this project. Council members were relieved to note that the new rates will jump less than anticipated.

The minimum bill for city residents will go from $6.28 for 2,000 gallons of water to $14.32. Out-of-city residents' rates will be set at $15 for the same amount. This is the minimum bill. As part of the loan agreement for these funds, the city adopted an ordinance to revise sewer rates on an annual basis beginning in July 2013. Rates will increase annually based upon the Consumer Price Index from the previous year or by 2 percent, whichever is greater. This ensures any depreciation or other maintenance needed can be funded as needed in future years.

The meeting opened with a reading from council member Denny Howard of a resolution honoring Ben

The family of Ben Long, former Bloomfield mayor and Public Works supervisor, gathered Monday evening for a presentation by the Bloomfield City Council. Bloomfield City Council member Denny Howard presented a resolution honoring Long and his service to the family. Long died March 12. He had retired in December.

Long, who died on March 12. Long had served as mayor as well as 26 years as superintendent of public works before retiring in December 2011. Howard presented a framed copy of the ordinance to Long's family in attendance at the meeting.

The Council selected Smith and Company to conduct the city's annual audit at a cost of $4,950 per year for three years. An additional $1,500 was approved for audit of the water and sewer system which is mandated to be conducted separately by the federal government. Brown and Company came in second with a bid of $5,800.

The city of Bloomfield has money waiting for some non-profit group to earn in exchange for participating in the litter abatement program. Funds are granted to the city from the state and must be used or reimbursed. Any group interested in this community project should contact city hall in Bloomfield.

Matthew Hite spoke to the council about closing two unfinished roads in the city limits. Representing Old Bloomfield Holdings LLC, he outlined that the roads in question had been platted but not yet developed and with the LLC now owning property on all sides or parts of Fairview and Chestnut streets that those sections be closed and not developed.

Council members were concerned about any other residents in the area who may need these roads for access to their property and will review the request and consider it at the next meeting in May. Hite said the LLC will cover all costs associated with this action.

Mayor Rhonda Hagan is hoping to develop and print a local business brochure to help market Bloomfield area businesses and other attractions. She has submitted a grant request to the Bardstown-Nelson County Tourist Commission to help defray the cost to the city.

Ethanol, old boat motors don't mix

When I arrived in Florida last December, my old boat initially ran fine for a couple days. It has an old Mariner 60-horse engine. It's been a good motor.

After a couple of fishing trips in early January, the engine lost power. It obviously wasn't getting enough gas and wasn't running on all three cylinders.

I called a repairman to come check it out. He cleaned the carburetors. It ran well briefly, but then the same problem returned. He came back two more times (no charge) and finally determined the problem related to the use of ethanol in my gasoline. It caused the gas line in the motor to deteriorate and break off little pieces into the line, which continued to foul the engine.

"This is what I spend most of my time on these days," said the repairman as he replaced the gas line with a new material more resistant to the ethanol.

The old 1985 engine has run great since the fuel line replacement.

When I read the following from BoatUS, I thought it was worth passing on to readers:

"Ever since E10 gasoline (gas containing 10 percent ethanol or more) became widely available several years ago, the nation's largest recreational boat owners group, BoatUS, has received hundreds of calls and emails complaining about boat engine problems.

The majority of complaints concern older outboard motors, those made before about 1990. BoatUS' Seaworthy magazine asked Mercury Marine's Ed Alyanak and Frank Kelley, who between them have more than 60 years of experience, to find out what's made these decades-old outboards more susceptible to ethanol's well-known problems and what owners can do.

- Vulnerable hoses: In the mid 1980s new standards (SAE J1527) for fuel hoses were developed for "gasohol," which was known to deteriorate rubber and plastics. Since then, problems with hoses have largely gone away, but that doesn't mean they are maintenance free.

Tech Tip: Any hose older than 10 years should be replaced. Here's another way to test rubber fuel hose condition: wipe a clean rag along the hose. If you smell gas on the rag, replace the hose immediately.

- Carburetors: O-rings and rubber carburetor parts on older engines tend to get hard and brittle when exposed to ethanol and then break off in bits and pieces causing clogs, misfires and shutdowns. Pre-1990 carburetors were also made from alloys that didn't stand up to ethanol, leading to corrosion that can cause tiny fuel orifices to clog, resulting in hard starts and poor running. Old carbs are also "dumb" in that they were designed to run on only one type of fuel. Ethanol, however, has more oxygen and affects the air/fuel ratio,

BASEBALL

PETER W. ZUBATY/The Kentucky Standard

The tag was there awaiting Bethlehem's Connor Ballard on a steal of third, but the Adair County fielder left the ball behind as Ballard was successful, later scoring a run in the fifth inning Saturday. Ballard collected three hits in the game and starter Jimmy Keating was solid through seven innings, but was victimized by three unearned runs. The Eagles rallied for two in the fifth and got a two-out single from Brandon Ray in the bottom of the seventh to tie it at 3-3 and send the game into extra innings. Ray came on to throw five strong innings in relief, but the senior allowed a run in the top of the 12th and the Eagles couldn't answer in the 4-3 loss. Bethlehem picked up a 7-6 win over Salem, Va., yesterday in the Mingo Bay Classic in South Carolina to improve to 7-8 overall.

Cardinals forge ahead under new leadership

pzubaty@kystandard.com

For Nelson County tennis, it's been the shake-up before the shake-up, as Rhonda Horn takes over as coach this year after the departure of Don Campbell with an eye toward growing the Cardinal program in advance of this fall's opening of Thomas Nelson High School.

Initially, last year's assistant, Grant Linton, was to take over the program and Horn was to be his assistant and focus on the girls' squad. But Linton took a job at Taylor County, and "the job kind of fell to me," Horn said.

As with any coaching change, there have been some adjustments to make.

"She's very good," said senior Ying Chan, who teams with classmate Adrienne Roark as the top girls' doubles squad. "She's been trying to get us to do drills and get us back into shape. She has a lot of things up her sleeve."

So far, so good for senior Jackson Thompson, the top boys' player and team captain.

"It's a different coaching style, but it's been really, really great," he said. "Everything's been a little bit different, but it's really worked well for us, I think."

Gumm plays key role in Kaiser Cup win

The KPGA Assistants have been on a roll the past few years and have been creeping up on the lead held by the KPGA Head Pros in the Kaiser Cup. They have now taken the lead in the series by winning the cup last week, 11-9, at Belterra Golf Club. Their nine victories now edge the KPGA Members share of titles by one.

KPGA Assistant Captain Blake Watts led his squad with a singles match play win over Aaron McDowell by a result of 5&3. Other assistants winning their matches were Chris Redle, Corey Stith and Austin Meyer, as well as Bardstown's Jeff Gumm.

The additional half-point came from Grant Sturgeon as he went all square with his opponent, Patrick Williams.

Damage to a boat engine carburetor as a result of ethanol at 10 percent (E10) is shown in photograph.

causing engines to run leaner and hotter. Tech Tip: The best solution with old outboards is to run straight gas — if you can find it. Some mechanics may also have the ability to “recalibrate” a carburetor to tolerate E10 (note: gas with ethanol greater than 10 percent should never be used with any boat engine).

- Plastic fuel filter bowl: Some older engines may have plastic fuel filter bowls. Tech Tip: If you still have one, replace immediately with a metal bowl.
- Fuel fill gasket: Keeping water out of the fuel tank is even more important with ethanol as it can eventually lead to the formation of two separate solutions in the gas tank (water and fuel), also known as phase separation. The process is more common on older boats, which are more likely to have accumulated water at the bottom of the tank. Once phase separation happens — the tipping point when water in the gas is either harmlessly ingested or transformed into a corrosive mixture no engine will run on — there's no going back. No fuel additive can restore E10 back to its normal state.

Horn, who was an accomplished high school player but had her college career cut short by injuries, said she has tried to get her players to rethink how they play, to a degree.

“I’m definitely a skills player,” she said. “For me, it’s more about placement and skill and knowing your strokes, rather than power and just getting out there and playing what I call ‘bully tennis,’ which is just hitting it as hard as you can and hoping it goes in. Working on volleys, working on groundstrokes — fundamentals. I’m pretty much a fundamentalist.”

Horn said she has a number of newcomers, but “a good mix” of returning veterans — many taking on new roles, such as Thompson — upon which to build the squad.

“I think one of our largest challenges is where we have so many newcomers is getting the team to blend,” Horn said. Also, “obviously, the split is looming, where we’ll have part of our players going to Nelson County and part of them going to Thomas Nelson. Just keeping them focused and together as a team this year is one of our biggest challenges, but I think we’ve done that. We’ve really merged together as a team.”

Chan said the upperclassmen have been looked to for more leadership this season to help ease the transition to a new coach.

“Since there’s a lot of freshmen this year, we’ve been doing this ‘big sister, little brother’ type deal (where) we’ve been hitting with them and trying to get them to not be nervous for their first matches,” she said.

Thompson said he has embraced the role, serving as a guide for younger players and helping teach them things such as court etiquette, and just to know the game better.

“It helps me interact with people I don’t really know, younger kids at school,” he said.

Roark said she enjoys the responsibility of being one-half of the top doubles squad.

“It’s been pretty cool being able to be at the top instead of at the bottom” of the depth chart, she said.

“We’ve been having to mentor some of the underclassmen.”

The Cardinals also return their top girls’ singles player in the form of junior Savannah Wimsatt, who won last year’s district title in a surprise.

Thompson inherits the top singles’ role after being No. 2 last year.

“It’s exciting, especially since I started playing since I was in seventh grade,” he said. “It was hard and it took a lot of effort and a lot of work, but it’s really now that I’m a senior ... and I get to be in the top spot.”

Mackenzie Peterson and David Chan have played well as the No. 1 boys’ doubles squad.

Other key contributors are Joseph Cesare, Tanner Stallings and Brandon Edelen on the boys’ side. Mallory Proctor, Erin Dalton and the doubles squad of Autumn Keene and Amber Pate figure prominently in the girls’ squad’s hopes.

“We have a lot of new people this year, which is exciting because it’s always fun to see the program grow,” Thompson said. “It’s going to be a great year.”

Horn said she loves teaching the sport and, along with Jane Page — Horn’s assistant who is also heavily involved in growing tennis as a community sport — are hoping to instill in the players a love of a game that can be played for an entire lifetime. Community outreach is part of it as well.

“We intend to really get the community involved with both programs next year, and with both programs working together instead of being considered separate,” she said.

They’ve even encouraged participation by youngsters in the community, starting up a ball boy and ball girl program to help chase down tennis balls during matches at NCHS.

“We give them a free T-shirt,” Horn said.

The Cardinals were in action Tuesday after press time against Bethlehem. Nelson County visits Taylor County Thursday.

Cedar-apple rust cycle begins in the area

Predictions for this season include a high incidence of fire blight and cedar apple rust. The signs of fire blight (scorched-looking foliage and stem tips) are rather boring compared to the freaky looking appendages that "ripen" with cedar-apple rust. Get ready to start seeing large, orange gelatinous spore horns hanging from cedars like they are decorated with Japanese lanterns. They strike awe and dread from me because they are fabulous looking creations of nature but they also forewarn a rust problem in the orchard for next year.

Dr. John Hartman of University of Kentucky explains the disease cycle: many rust diseases must have two specific hosts for the disease to complete the various stages of its life cycle. For example, the fungus that causes cedar-hawthorn rust needs a Juniperus species, such as the eastern red cedar or an ornamental juniper to spend its parasitic stage of life.

During the parasitic stage of life, the fungal spores appear in the springtime as bright orange teliospores on the diseased cedar. As these teliospores develop they are carried through the air to the next host plant. These other hosts must be roseaceous, like apples, hawthorns, crabapples or serviceberries.

While on the second host plant, the rust disease continues to develop into the fruiting stage that then travels back to re-infect nearby cedars or junipers. Apparently after 18 months in this stage the spores return in the second spring to start all over if the conditions are favorable. They were very favorable for cedar-apple rust in the last few weeks.

All of the various rust diseases are caused by specific species of the fungus Gymnosporangium. The fungus must travel between a Juniperus species and some roseaceous plant; and back

ROSIE AND AMETHYST

Puppies usually speak for themselves and these two are no exception. They are 10-week-old lab mix pups that look like they have been face painted with a matching white line down their face. You must come see.

RINGO

Sort of shy but a gentle cat, Ringo is a very pretty boy. He is about 8 years old with black and white markings and gold green eyes. You will love him.

BARTON

Barton is a very cool, laid-back cat. He is black with gorgeous green eyes. If you are happy having a cat that likes to sit and observe life then Barton is the cat for you.

TOBY

Toby is a very loving 2-1/2-year-old toy poodle. He is gray in color and is full of energy. This little guy is good with kids and will make a great family addition.

Learn vital facts, win prizes at Flaget Baby Fair

On April 28, expectant moms and dads will have the opportunity to learn vital information about pregnancy, and about infant and toddler care, at the Flaget Baby Fair. This free event is put on every year by the staff of the Flaget Birth Center. This year the fair will be 11 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Flaget Hospital campus off KY 245.

There are many things to know in order to have a healthy baby. Did you know, for example, that due to the work of the March of Dimes, newborns are now screened at birth for 29 serious, yet treatable, genetic, metabolic or functional conditions? This is a sweeping advance in modern health care that is saving the lives of babies nationwide. With an early diagnosis, these disorders can be successfully managed or treated to prevent death, disability or other severe complications such as mental retardation. A simple blood stick can end up protecting your baby from going undiagnosed with a treatable problem. At the Flaget Birth Center, every baby receives this testing.

And did you know that pregnant women and nursing mothers can improve their health by increasing their intake of DHA omega-3 fatty acids, according to the March of Dimes? The MOD suggests that pregnant women consume at least 200 milligrams of DHA, one of the three major omega-3 fatty acids, daily to help support fetal brain and eye development. After the baby is born, DHA omega-3 fatty acids consumed while breastfeeding may also help support mental, visual and motor skill development, according to the MOD.

Omega-3 fatty acids are found in certain types of fish, nuts and vegetable oils. The richest fish sources include salmon, trout, mackerel, sardines and tuna. Pregnant and nursing women, or those planning a pregnancy, should eat up to 12 ounces of low-mercury content fish per week. You can get more information on safe fish consumption at the MOD website: www.marchofdimes.com.

Come to the Flaget Baby Fair to get a wealth of additional information, and bring the rest of your clan. Vendors and businesses will man booths that offer free samples, door prizes, refreshments and games. This year a number of lucky families will win savings bonds and gift baskets donated by the hospital. Don't miss the chance to start a nest egg for your newborn.

Older children will enjoy the chance to bounce around in an inflatable gym. Parents and grandparents can take advantage of free educational materials that will help them raise their youngsters.

Every year a treasure trove of prizes is handed out at the baby fair, including baby blankets, diaper bags, parenting books, stuffed animals, baskets and more. Don't miss your chance to get valuable information about your little one. And don't forget to bring the whole family.

>> AROUND KENTUCKY

Here's a sampling of events you might want to check out

Through Aug. 26: A new exhibit, "About Face: Kentucky Artisan Works Inspired by the Human Face," opened March 3 at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea, and will be on display through Aug. 26.

This exhibit features a wide range of works in which the human face is a central element, focal point or inspiration. Created by 43 Kentucky artisans working in photography, painting, fiber, clay, gourds, wood, bronze, collage and mixed-media, this exhibit showcases realistic and abstract works.

The center's exhibits, shopping and travel information areas are open winter hours daily 9 a.m.-6 p.m., with the cafe open 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Admission is free. The center features works by more than 650 artisans from 100 counties throughout the state. For more information call (859) 985-5448 or visit the center's website at www.kentuckyartisancenter.ky.gov.

April 11: Kevin and Christina Shank will be performing a flute and guitar concert 7 p.m. in the Morrison Art Gallery in the Administration Building on the Elizabethtown Community and Technical College Campus. A reception will follow. The program will include solo guitar pieces as well as flute and guitar pieces featuring the music of Bach, Tarrega, Piazzolla, and Appalachian Mountain Songs. The concert is sponsored by the Elizabethtown Community and Technical College Fine Arts Committee, is open and free to the public. For more information contact Kevin Shank at (270) 706-8495.

April 12: North America's Only Dhol 'N Brass Band, Red Baraat 8 p.m. in the Bomhard Theater at Kentucky Center. Led by dholi Sunny Jain, Red Baraat is the first and only dhol 'n brass band in North America, melding infectious North Indian Bhangra rhythms with funky New Orleans' style brass.

A favorite at Jazz, World and Roots music festivals, this NYC-based group plays fresh originals and Bollywood favorites with an explosive stage performance and presence that brings audiences to their feet.

National Geographic says "Red Baraat has been one of the New York music scene's best-kept secrets." The Wall Street Journal says they are "a Big Band for the World."

Tickets start at $22.50. Call The Kentucky Center Box Office at 584-7777, toll free at (800) 775-7777, (502) 562-0730 (TTY), or visit www.kentuckycenter.org. Kentucky Center Member tickets can be purchased by calling the Member Hotline; MembersFirst ($100-499 donors), call (502) 562-0144, and CenterCircle Members ($500+) call (502) 562-0195. Please call (502) 562-0111 (V), (502) 562-0140 (TTY) or email access@kentuckycenter.org for information about the range of accessibility services offered to enhance your performance experience.

April 14: Members of the Berea Welcome Center Carvers will demonstrate their woodcarving techniques from 10:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea. Carving that day will be David Buzzard of Lexington, Bill Currey of Liberty and Jack Gann of Berea.

Woodcarving is an ancient art found in every culture and part of the world. Carving styles include whittling, line carving, chip carving, pierced carving, relief carving, in-the-round carving (sculpture), architectural carving and chainsaw carving. Woods generally used for spoon and bowl carving are harder woods such as walnut, oak, maple or cherry.

The Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea is located at 200 Artisan Way, off Interstate -75 at Berea exit 77. The center's exhibits, shopping and travel information areas are open daily, year round, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. with the cafe open 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Admission is free.

April 14: Greening the Older Home 1 p.m. April 14 at The Brennan House Historic Home led by architect Gary Kleier, this workshop will explore components of a historic home and highlight how preservation can be the ultimate in "green" living. With 33 years of experience, and specialties in historic renovation, restoration and applying green concepts in historic structures, Kleier is sure to help those dealing with rehabilitation issues in a historic home who are interested in achieving environmentally friendly results in the most cost efficient manner.

Admission is $20 for Preservation Louisville members; $30 for non-members. Advanced registration is required as class size is limited. Call (502) 540-5146 to register.

Through April 15: For 25 years, nearly 600 women across Appalachia have been learning they have the strength and courage to finish their education and to build the self-esteem they need to find their potential. At no cost to them, women who find themselves in transition and are seeking to be inspired and build their confidence are doing just that through the New Opportunity School for Women (NOSW) in Berea, KY.

Now is the time to submit applications for the Summer, 2012 session. Applicants who are selected and complete the three-week residential program will find themselves to be more self-sufficient, more confident, and will be an inspiration for their families and community. The New Opportunity School staff and alumni also provide a strong support system for graduates.

The New Opportunity School's unique program has received national recognition on Oprah and in People magazine. The 2012 NOSW Summer Residential Session is June 3-23. The deadline for application is April 15, 2012.

Requests for applications and/or additional information should be addressed to The New Opportunity School for Women, 204 Chestnut Street, Berea, KY 40403, or by calling (859) 985-7200. Our website, www.nosw.org, provides additional information regarding our no-cost program and a printable application.

April 18: The Academy Of St. Martin in the Fields to perform with Joshua Bell As Part Of The Glenview Trust Enriching Life Series 7:30 p.m. at Whitney Hall. Tickets start at $30. Call The Kentucky Center Box Office at 584-7777, toll free at (800) 775-7777, (502) 562-0730 (TTY), or visit www.kentuckycenter.org. Kentucky Center Member tickets can be purchased by calling the Member Hotline; MembersFirst ($100-499 donors), call (502) 562-0144, and CenterCircle Members ($500+) call (502) 562-0195. Please call (502) 562-0111 (V), (502) 562-0140 (TTY) or email access@kentuckycenter.org for information about the range of accessibility services we offer to enhance your performance experience.

April 19-22: Finchville Community Center will have its annual yard sale. Any and all communities are encouraged to set up along Highway 55. The hub of the yard sale will be at the community center in Finchville. For more information or booth rentals, call (502) 834-7754.

April 26: Purchase tickets today for the annual Empty

Bowls fundraiser which is held to bring awareness of hunger in the Owensboro community. Empty Bowls 2012 will take place at a new location this year: Third Baptist Church, 527 Allen Street, starting at 6 p.m. This local event is part of a national one to raise funds for those in need of food. Brescia University's Art Department supplies the clay, glaze, and location for local potters who donate their time to make ceramic bowls. The bowls are then used as soup bowls at the fundraiser. The cost per person is $15 which includes dinner and the unique, handmade bowl. Soups this year include Tomato Basil, Black Bean, Chicken Noodle, Lentil, and Tuscan Vegetable.

New this year will be a silent auction. Local artists are creating one-of-a-kind pieces that will be available exclusively that evening.

All proceeds from Empty Bowls will fund one or more local soup kitchens or food pantries, who will be announced during the dinner. Last year $3,260 was given to St. Benedict Joseph Homeless Shelter.

Only 300 tickets are available and may be purchased in advance by cash or check Monday through Friday from 8 a.m.-noon and 1-4 p.m. at the Information Desk at Brescia University's Campus Center (717 Frederica Street, Owensboro). You may also purchase tickets at the door.

For more information on Empty Bowls, contact Tina Kasey at 270-686-2110.

Hicks hits the big time as songwriter in Nashville

Jimmy Dean Hicks has hit the big time as a songwriter.

But the Nelson County native had to venture to Nashville to find that success.

"You can't make honey if you're not in the beehive," he said.

Hicks, 30, moved to the "beehive" seven years ago and started the climb to the top.

He has co-written two No. 1 Oak Ridge Boys' songs, has had several other songs on the charts and has recently started his own publishing company.

The first time Hicks heard the song that would become his first No. 1 hit is a memory that won't easily be erased.

He was hanging out in a place called the Bar-B-Cutie, Hicks said, when the strains of the Oak Ridge Boys "It Takes a Little Rain" reached his ears.

"It was a bizarre feeling," he said. "It was overwhelming."

Getting an ‘Ear’s-eye view’

Lisa Jo Wygal scopes out “patient” Ashley Ritchie’s ear, while Savannah Bush, left, and LPN Darlene Hanson share a laugh. The trio of New Haven School eighth-graders was participating in an Operation Preparation mentoring session with nurse Hanson, a unit supervisor for Green Meadows Health Care Center, Mount Washington. Operation Preparation was a statewide effort that took place in March and coupled students with volunteer community mentors working in professions of interest to the students. In New Haven, 16 adult volunteers visited with 50 students to discuss career choices and expectations representing 13 career clusters. In addition to the nursing profession, a professional nanny, a crime scene investigator, coroner, and many other worthwhile careers were represented. The school received good feedback from the adult mentors, as well as the students, said Christy VanDeventer, director of the Village Family Resource and Youth Services Center. The Village FRYSC helped co-sponsor the event.

St. Gregory Lenten Food Drive

The 137 students at St. Gregory School collected an amazing 3,416 food items this year during their annual Lenten Food Drive. This is the most food that has ever been collected during a food drive at the school. The food will be donated to St. Vincent de Paul in Bardstown. At left, Hope Miller, Principal-for-a-Day Lizzi Seyle and Maggie Green help tally the items.

Local students accept scholarships to EKU

RICHMOND, Ky. — Hundreds of incoming freshmen and transfer students already have accepted merit-based scholarships to attend Eastern Kentucky University. Nelson County recipients include:

- Samantha Bowling, Bardstown, Bardstown High School, Regents Scholarship
- Chelsea Perkins, Bardstown, Nelson County High School, Regents Scholarship

“These students have found programs here at EKU that meet their needs academically, therefore Eastern is doing all it can to help them achieve their dreams financially through our merit-based scholarship program,” said Brett Morris, interim director of admissions at the university. “The process is much easier now because students are granted these scholarships automatically if they qualify. There’s no need for a separate application.”

Students who qualify for merit-based scholarships have until May 1 to accept them, Morris said. (Additional scholarship recipients will be announced later.)

The Excellence Award, Founders Award, Regents Scholarship, Presidential Scholarship and Merit Scholarship are for incoming high school freshmen. The Colonel, Colonel Plus, Maroon and Maroon Plus scholarships are for incoming transfer students.

For more information about all the scholarships available to EKU students, visit scholarships.eku.edu or call the university’s Scholarship Office at 859-622-8032.

Local student named to WKU honor list

Ryan Dawson, a freshman at Western Kentucky University and a 2011 graduate of Nelson County High School received the designation of President’s Scholar for the Fall 2011 semester.

To be selected for this honor a student must compile an academic standing of 3.8 or better out of a possible 4.0.

>> MOVIE REVIEW

‘American Reunion’

Those boys are at it again – now as men

In the history of raunchy high-school movies, there was “Porky’s;” then came “American Pie” (1999). In this latter film, pie was treated very badly. More recently there was “The Help” (2011) and this time, pie was used as revenge. In the former film, five carefree, boys made life miserable for all those connected with their high school. Let’s just say they did not set a moral example for their fellow classmates. A so-so sequel followed in 2001.

Now, 13 years later, the Class of 1999 is having a reunion. No one seems to be interested but the quintet of bad boys shows up, each maturing in his own way. Jim is married to Michele (Alyson Hannigan) with a young son. Their sex life doesn’t seem to be functioning normally. Oz (Chris Klein) is a well-known sports announcer without a love life. Kevin (Thomas Ian Nicholas) is also married. Finch (Eddie Kaye Thomas) seems to be the most successful of the bunch without actually doing anything, or so he says. Then there’s the devil-may-care Stifler (Seann William Scott) who can cause trouble without really trying.

The plotline is not complicated; it’s just how each guy reacts to what happens that makes this film kinda funny. There are laughs, but most evoke giggles — embarrassed giggles. But that’s what is supposed to happen. These are the lamest jokes, about the raunchiest subjects you can imagine, or rather what I can imagine. The best scenes are from two veteran actors, Eugene Levy and Jennifer Coolidge, who know how to carry off this kind of comedy.

Those who have seen the original film(s), probably haven’t seen the actors in any outstanding roles lately. Obviously, then their acting didn’t lead to other jobs. That’s easy to understand. But still “American Reunion” succeeds for what it sets out to do — to be a raunchy teenage sex comedy. It has all the best qualities, which means that it has all the worst qualities for parents policing their children. The subtle humor is made more effective by the sincerity with which the characters carry out their plotlines, complete with bathroom jokes, crude language, and nudity. Did I leave anything out? If you attend this film, you know what to expect. So don’t complain.

FRED ALLEN
ALLEN’S ALLEY
>> Film and Play Reviews

Family Rating: R for crude and sexual content throughout, nudity, language, brief drug use and teen drinking. Add anything else which might offend you.

Also featuring Tara Reid, Mena Suvari, John Cho, and Jay Harrington. Directed by Jon Hurwitz and Hayden Schlossberg. Musical score by Lyle Workman. (1 hr. 53 min.)

Also opening: A return showing of TITANIC, (1997) in 3D.

Family Rating: PG-13 for disaster related peril and violence, brief nudity, sensuality and brief language.

Call (502) 955-8512.

A great way to learn about spring flowers is to follow their progression from bud to blossom over several weeks. Join us for these opportunities to learn about wildflowers and their stories throughout the season. Each stroll will focus on wildflower adaptations, ecology, folklore and history. Join us for one or all of these wonderful walks!

- Spring Break 2012: Break Out at Bernheim! Through Friday, April 13 Visitor Center
- Make this a spring break to remember by tailoring a unique Bernheim experience for your family and friends. Daily nature programs and guided hikes are available, plus on-your-own hiking, fishing, picnicking, wildlife viewing and opportunities for free play at our Children's Play Garden. Come roam the fields, forests and creeks during Spring Break at Bernheim!
- To help plan your spring break adventure, we suggest our daily drop-in activities and guided nature hikes. Participate in one or participate in them all.
- Daily Discovery Stations: 10 a.m.-2 p.m.
- Daily Nature Hike: 2-3 p.m.
- Groups of five or more are advised to make arrangements at least one day in advance by contacting Whitney Wurzel, Youth and Family Programs Manager, at whitneyw@bernheim.org or (502) 955-8512 x251.

- Bernheim Visiting Artist Patrick Dougherty Lecture
- At 21c Museum Hotel, 700 West Main Street, downtown Louisville
- Tuesday, April 24 6 p.m.
- Free, donations appreciated
- Bernheim Arboretum and Research Forest is pleased to bring world-renowned artist Patrick Dougherty to the region April 9-26. Dougherty's three-week installation of woven willow art will delight and inspire visitors — during construction, and for years to come. Dougherty has created more than 200 works worldwide, and his large-scale, whimsical sculptures draw visitors into the energy, magnitude and beauty of nature, influenced by the hands of the artist. His work is unique and built to fit the site, playing with perspectives, views and other components of the landscape. Like much of the art found at Bernheim, the work itself will evolve as it weathers and ages — a beautiful, natural process — and will one day return to nature. Over the three- to four-year life-expectancy of the sculpture, visitors will be intrigued, inspired and often amused by this larger-than-life installation. Join us for a free, public lecture (donations appreciated) by the artist on Tuesday, April 24 at 6 p.m. at 21c Museum, 700 West Main Street, in downtown Louisville.

Bernheim thanks 21c Museum for co-sponsoring the lecture.

- Bernheim Visiting Artist Patrick Dougherty Installation Unveiling
- Thursday, April 26 2:30 p.m.
- Visitor Center
- Free, donations appreciated
- Bernheim's gate is open every day 7 a.m. until about sunset, except Dec. 25 and Jan. 1. Admission to the park is always free for members and free for all every weekday. Weekends and holidays have a $5 environmental impact fee per vehicle for the public. Schools and tour groups are welcome. Call in advance for fees and scheduling. The Visitor Center and Gift Shop are open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. every day, including weekends. Isaac's Café, in the Visitor Center, is open 11 a.m.-4 p.m. with refreshments. Nature classes and group hiking opportunities are available, current offerings are online at bernheim.org. Bernheim is in Clermont, Ky., about 20 minutes from the Louisville airport. From I-65, take exit 112 and follow the signs. The entrance is about 1 mile from the interstate. Bernheim is a non-profit organization that relies on memberships, grants and donations for support.

again. However, there are different types of rusts. Cedar-apple, caused by G. juniperus-virginianae, rust primarily infects the foliage of apples and crabapples. Yellow spots appear on the foliage in the spring, turning orange as the season progresses. Whitish, tubular spores will develop around these spots by summer. This seems to be the most distinguishable characteristic for diagnosis.

Cedar-hawthorn rust is caused by G. globosum and appears on hawthorns, apples, crabapples, pear, quince, service berry, and mountain ash. The appearance of this rust disease is similar to cedar-apple rust but the white, tubular spores are not present, just the leaf spots.

Cedar-quince — caused by G. clavipes — rust proves to be the most damaging to plant material. The list of susceptible plants include those that have been mentioned above plus, quince, photinia, medlar, chokeberry and cotoneaster. The foliar spots are not apparent here rather the infection is manifested in the twigs and fruiting structures of the plant. Young twigs that become infected can die and repeated infection can cause the decline of the tree. According to University of Kentucky plant pathologists we will see few cases of cedar-hawthorn and cedar-quince because the telia (the orange, gelatinous horns) were finished producing once the rains hit; not so with cedar-apple, though.

These diseases are very difficult to control using fungicides because timing is critical. Dr. Hartman suggests that we grow disease resistant varieties of trees and that we remove any old, abandoned or worthless host trees.

Being Lot 52 of Cormans Crossing, Phase II, as set forth upon the Plat of same, of record in Plat Cabinet 7, Slot 76, in the Office of the Clerk of Nelson County, Kentucky.
The successful bidder may pay the purchase price on the day of sale in cash, or in the alternative, upon a credit of thirty (30) days, with twenty percent (20%) being paid in cash on the day of sale, and a bond for the balance of the purchase price with interest at twelve percent (12%) per annum from the date of sale, which shall be executed by the purchaser with approved surety, made payable to the Master Commissioner, having the full force and effect of a judgment, and a lien shall be retained by the Commissioner securing the payment of the purchase price. The buyer will be responsible for taxes from the date of Judgment to the present date. The Master Commissioner will make a good faith effort to obtain and pay all taxes or assessments upon the property for prior years, however this cannot be guaranteed. The property shall be sold free and clear of all parties named in the above-styled action, but subject to any recorded easements and rights in way, any facts which an inspection or accurate survey might reveal, and zoning regulations of Nelson County, Kentucky.
The Master Commissioner does not obtain title inspections or investigate for further liens on the property. The purchaser is responsible for title inspection and/or any additional liens not named in the Judgment and Order of Sale.
The purchaser may take possession of the property pursuant to the terms of the judgment. If the judgment does not make provision for possession the buyer may seek possession of the property through the court system after payment of the full purchase price. You can contact my office for additional information.
The property described above has been adjudged indivisible, and it cannot be divided without materially impairing its value or the value of Plaintiff's interest thereon, and lien thereon, and said real estate is to be sold as a whole, subject to those items set out above, but free and clear of all other liens and encumbrances of the parties herein, but the Plaintiff, the Court and the Commissioner shall not be deemed to have warranted title to any purchaser. Said property is sold subject to the Judgment and Order of Sale in this case which shall be reviewed carefully prior to purchase.
Surety must be present at sale to sign the bond and cannot be the spouse of the purchaser(s).
Bidders will be prepared to promptly comply with the above terms.

Comments on her hair color make wild child feel blue

DEAR ABBY: What's the best thing to do when someone insults me for being myself? My hair has been bright blue for the last two semesters of college. I like it. I'm young, and my family is letting me express my "wild" side while I'm in school.

blue? It would have been interesting to see her reaction. It would also be interesting to know what shade his current girlfriend's hair is. When others comment about the unusual color of your hair, instead of treating it as an insult, smile and say, "Don't judge a book by its cover." Then change the subject.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 26 years. I love him, but he's a terrible listener. He's not that way with everyone. When we're out socializing, he's a good conversationalist and a polite listener. It's when we are home that he never lets me finish a sentence. When we're alone, I can't express a complete opinion or thought without being interrupted halfway through a word or sentence. He just cuts me off and starts talking on the subject.

I'm an intelligent woman with valid opinions, but he would rather hear the sound of his own voice than mine. How do I get him to let me speak and not interrupt?

SILENCED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SILENCED: Is your husband controlling in other aspects of your relationship? If not, the problem may be that you have been together so long he thinks he knows where your sentences are going, so he responds before you complete your entire thought. One way to handle this would be to tell your husband how patronized it makes you feel when he does it. Another would be to interrupt HIM by saying, "Excuse me! I wasn't finished talking." Or, "You finished my sentence, but that wasn't what I was going to say. What I meant was ..."

DEAR ABBY: My sister, "Beth," and I are very close, but a constant source of contention is her boyfriend, "Brody." Beth and Brody have broken up several times, and each time it happens, she fills me in on every horrible thing he has ever done.

They always seem to get back together, and then Beth expects me to like him despite everything I know. Does the fact that she forgives and forgets mean that I have to do the same?

TOO MUCH INFO
IN OHIO

DEAR TOO MUCH INFO: No, it doesn't. But you should be civil, even if you're not warm and friendly. Then cross your fingers and hope your sister recognizes less drama is healthier and the relationship ends soon.

>>HOROSCOPES

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Your take-charge attitude saves the day. Your intuition plays a significant role in your decision-making process. The unexpected forces you to regroup more than once. By now, the unexpected is expected. Tonight: Early to bed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Talk directly with a partner instead of leaving a message. Your high energy makes all the difference in how you interact with others. You could carry on until the wee hours. Tonight: Keep your opinions to yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Defer to others, as ultimately you will have less on your plate. A brainstorming session later in the day brings you insight and direction. You know you can work with this person, so allow a natural bonding to occur. Tonight: Continue a talk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Others step forward and share a problem. Listen to news and know that more information of the same nature could be forthcoming. Do more listening than talking. A boss or someone you look up to acts in a most unpredictable manner. Tonight: The only answer is "yes."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Your creativity and energy, when funneled properly, could make a big difference. Use your abilities to the max, and consider an opportunity once more. You might see it a lot differently this time. Tonight: Put your feet up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You might suffer from sleep deprivation this morning. This will pass, and quickly at that. Your imagination and creativity will soar by the afternoon. At this point, take on what you want. Trust your instincts. Tonight: Take a midweek break.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Your sense of direction could define the morning. Use that period to the max, when the Force is with you. By the afternoon, some quiet work or yoga will help you gain an even bigger perspective. Tonight: Make it early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Understand what is happening behind the scenes. How you see a situation could change dramatically. Be sensitive to someone who frequently makes you nervous. Find out what is going on with this person. Tonight: Hang out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Use the morning to the max. By the afternoon, your interest could change; you might become a little flighty. Let go and do what you want. Extremes are likely to play into what happens. Your energy will surge as a result of this change of pace. Tonight: Your treat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You move slowly into a new venture, relationship and/or commitment. Wondering what lies ahead is normal. If you do not take a risk, you will end up with nothing. It's an excellent idea to debate the pros and cons, but know that eventually a decision will be necessary. Tonight: Act like the world is your oyster.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Meetings in the morning seem to give you a sense of direction. Still, your follow-through could be flawed, which is unusual. The bottom line might be that you need some time off. Why not go with an offer rather than fight City Hall? Tonight: What would be best for you?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Say what you want. Do what you want. Trust in your abilities to move a project forward. You have the ability to hit a home run if you so choose. Listen to associates, but follow through on what you think might be best. Tonight: Where the action is.

ELECTION 2012

Will President Obama win re-election? Or will a new president be chosen? This year, American voters will decide.

The president must be at least 35 years old, have been born a United States citizen and have resided in the United States for at least 14 years. He or she can only be elected president for two four-year terms.

Presidential elections, which occur every four years, are managed according to rules set out in the Constitution. The system for electing the president in our democracy is called the Electoral College. You have to be eighteen years old to vote.

Choosing a Candidate: Caucus or Primary?

The difference between a caucus and a primary is that a caucus is usually a meeting where party members use discussion to eventually choose a candidate, while in a primary, party members vote privately for their choice of candidate.

While both systems are ways to choose a presidential candidate, the processes are different, with the caucus being a more informal approach. The caucuses and primaries in each state also select representatives, called delegates, to attend the convention.

Standards Link: Civics: Understand structure of political parties.

Help this candidate find his way to the press conference.

Conventions

When all the state primaries and caucuses are over, each political party has a big meeting called a convention. Thousands of delegates vote to choose their party's presidential candidate from the few most popular candidates chosen from the primaries and caucuses.

The chosen presidential candidate will usually select his or her own vice-president.

Use the code to find out where each party's conventions will be held this year.

The Republican National Convention will be held during the week of August 27, 2012 in this city:

1	4	1	9	1	2	1	5	8	1	1	3	7	3	1
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The Democratic National Convention will be held during the week of September 3, 2012 in this city:

2	6	1	1	3	8	1	1	4	1	4	1	4	1	0	2
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Election Day!

Election Day is the Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

On Election Day, all U.S. citizens can vote for the president plus that candidate's chosen vice-president on what is called the ticket.

Many Americans believe they are casting their vote to choose the president, but in fact, they are selecting the Electoral College. The person who wins the most votes in each state wins that state's electoral votes.

Standards Link: Civics: Understand structure of government and the process for electing the president.

To find the word that goes in the blank, write down each letter you pass along the correct path of this maze.

Candidate Search

Look through the newspaper for the names of people running for public office. Write down each name and the office that person is running for. Can you discover which political party each candidate represents?

Standards Link: Civics: Understand the role of political parties; understand the value of multiple parties in a democracy.

Kid Scoop® Puzzler

Donkeys and elephants have long been the symbols of the two biggest political parties in the United States, thanks to a cartoonist named Thomas Nast. In the 1870s, Nast drew a donkey to represent one party and an elephant to represent the other for Harper's Weekly magazine.

Unscramble the letters to see which party each animal represents.

The Online Scoop

This quiz tests your knowledge of presidential elections. Go to: www.kidscoop.com/kids

Proof It!

Are you an eagle-eyed reader? Read the article below and see if you can find the eight errors. Circle and correct them. One is done for you.

Electoral College

The Electoral College is not a place with teachers, professors and students. The Electrikal College is a system for electing the president of the Untied State.

Presidential candidates choose electors from each state to vote for them in the electoral vote. The number of electors for each state includes the state's two senators plus that state's U.S. representatives.

The number of representatives depends upon how many people live in the state. California has the most electoral votes with 55. The Distrik of Columbia, while not a state, has just three electoral votes.

These electors meat to vote for the president. The candidate who gets the majority of the electoral votes (more than half), will be the president.

It is possible for a candidate to receive the most votes by the people but still loose the Electoral Kollege vote.

Standards Link: Writing: Use strategies to edit written work.

Kid Scoo-doku™

Complete the grid by using all the letters in the word VOTES in each vertical and horizontal row. Each letter should only be used once in each row. Some spaces have been filled in for you.
